- 6.4.6.2 COUNTY reserves the right to conduct a background investigation of HBI's prospective employees prior to employment or assignment to contract duties and further reserves the right to conduct a background investigation of HBI's employees at any time and to bar such employees from working on this contract under appropriate circumstances.
- 6.4.6.3 COUNTY reserves the right to preclude HBI from employment or continued employment of any individual for this contract.
- 6.4.6.4 No personnel employed by HBI for this contract shall be on active probation or parole currently or within the last three (3) years.
- 6.4.6.5 HBI and employees of HBI shall be under a continuing obligation to disclose any prior or subsequent criminal conviction record, or pending criminal trial, to the Probation Department.
- 6.4.6.6 HBI shall submit names of employees to the COUNTY Contract Manager prior to the employees starting work on this contract. The COUNTY will schedule appointments to conduct a background investigation/record check based on fingerprints of HBI's employees, and further reserves the right to conduct a background investigation of HBI's employees at any time. HBI employees shall not begin work on this contract before receiving written notification of clearance from the COUNTY.
- 6.4.6.7 For required criminal conviction records, HBI will invoice the COUNTY a one-time fee of $544 to cover expenses. The current amount is $32 per record check and is subject to change by the State and/or location.

6.5 Contractor Furnished Items

HBI shall provide all personnel, equipment, and consumable supplies necessary to perform all services required by Exhibit B.

6.6 Contractor's Office

HBI shall maintain an office with a telephone in the company's name where the contractor conducts business. The office shall be staffed during the hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, Pacific time, by at least one employee who can respond to inquiries and complaints, which may be received about HBI's performance of the contract. When the office is closed, HBI shall return calls received within 72 hours of receipt of the call.

7.0 HOURS/DAYS OF WORK

HBI may be required to provide services on COUNTY recognized holidays. These holidays change from year to year. The COUNTY Contract Manager will provide HBI, upon request, with a list of COUNTY holidays.

8.0 UNSCHEDULED WORK

HBI agrees that any work performed outside the scope of Exhibit B, without the prior written approval of the COUNTY, shall be deemed to be a gratuitous effort on the part of HBI, and HBI shall have no claim therefore against the COUNTY.

9.0 PERFORMANCE REQUIREMENTS SUMMARY

- 9.1 All listings of services used in the Exhibit E are intended to be completely consistent with the Contract and Exhibit B, and are not meant in any case to create, extend, revise, or expand any obligation of HBI beyond that defined in the Contract and Exhibit B. In any case of apparent inconsistency between services as stated in the Contract, Exhibit B, and Exhibit E, the meaning apparent in the Contract and Exhibit B will prevail. If any service seems to be created in Exhibit E which is not clearly and forthrightly set forth in the Contract and Exhibit B, that apparent service will be null and void and place no requirement on HBI.
- 9.2 A standard level of performance will be required of HBI in the areas of education services. Exhibit E summarizes the required services, performance standards, maximum allowable deviation from the standards, methods of surveillance to be used by the COUNTY, and liquidated damages to be imposed for unacceptable performance. The COUNTY will evaluate HBI's performance under this contract using the quality assurance procedures specified in Exhibit E or other such procedures as may be necessary to ascertain HBI compliance with this contract. Failure of HBI to achieve this standard can result in an assessment of liquidated damages against HBI's monthly payment as determined by the COUNTY.
- 9.3 When HBI's performance does not conform to the requirements of this contract, the COUNTY will have the option to apply the following non-performance remedies:
  - Require HBI to implement a formal corrective action plan, subject to approval by the COUNTY. In the plan, HBI must include reasons for the unacceptable performance, specific steps to return performance to an acceptable level, and monitoring methods to prevent recurrence.

- Reduce payment to HBI by a computed amount based on the assessment fee(s) in Exhibit E.
- Reduce, suspend, or cancel this contract for systematic, deliberate misrepresentations or unacceptable levels of performance.
- Failure of HBI to comply with or satisfy the request(s) for improvement of performance or to perform the neglected work specified within ten (10) days shall constitute authorization for the COUNTY to have the service(s) performed by others. The entire cost of such work performed by others as a consequence of HBI's failure to perform said service(s), as determined by the COUNTY, shall be credited to the COUNTY on HBI's future invoice.

This section does not preclude the COUNTY'S right to terminate the contract upon ten (10) days written notice with or without cause, as provided for in the contract, Paragraph 20, Termination for Convenience of the COUNTY.

EVALUATION OVERVIEW

EVALUATION OVERVIEW

The evaluation of the Homeboy Industries (HBI) – Los Angeles County (COUNTY) Program will focus on four major outcome areas:

- (1) Individual attendance and participation
- (2) Individual retention after program assessment
- (3) Individual re-incarceration
- (4) Individual program failure

Two related outcome areas will be assessed:

- (1) Individual Referral Process
- (2) Comparative COUNTY Programs

These outcome areas will be assessed using quantitative and qualitative measures developed by the University of California Los Angeles Evaluation Team in collaboration with HBI.

In addition, this evaluation of the effectiveness of the HBI-COUNTY program, client outcomes will be compared in three more extensive ways, drawing upon the mixed methods approach used in the outcome evaluation described above. First, HBI non-COUNTY clients will be compared to COUNTY clients. Second, both groups will be compared with clients and client outcomes in two additional COUNTY programs (Juvenile and Adult Day Reporting Centers and COUNTY Anti-Gang Initiative in the four designated sites). All data requested for the two comparison programs must be provided by the COUNTY. In the quantitative study, the evaluation team will take into account baseline differences between these groups when examining outcomes. Additionally, within each group (COUNTY and non-COUNTY) differences in outcomes between males and females will be examined. Finally, information on retention and recidivism will be collected and analyzed for any possible trends.

Quantitative Data Collection Design

Measures to be used in the proposed study are listed in this section. Greater detail about each measure will be included in the final evaluation report.

Client Characteristic Data

- Demographic information

Psychosocial Functioning

Self-esteem, depression, and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) have all been found to be correlates with anti-social behaviors and misconduct in gang affiliated youth and adults. Therefore, we will measure each of these constructs using well-tested and established instruments.

In addition, Strength of Identification with Group Membership will also be measured. Disengagement strategies seek to encourage and help gang members break their ties with their gangs and successfully work their way into society as law-abiding citizens. Since belonging to a gang satisfies any number of social needs and since leaving a gang may require a major life adjustment, disengagement strategies must address these assorted needs while acting as a link between the person and the conventional world.

Strength of Identification with Group Membership relates to Social Identity Theory. This theory posits that a person has not one "personal self," but rather, several selves that correspond to widening circles of group membership. Different social contexts may trigger an individual to think, feel, and act on the basis of his personal, family, or national "level of self" (Tajfel and Turner, 1986). Apart from the level of self, an individual has multiple "social identities." Social identity is the individual's self-concept derived from perceived membership of social groups (Hogg & Vaughan, 2002). In other words, it is an individual-based perception of what defines the "us" associated with any internalized group membership. This can be distinguished from the notion of personal identity, which refers to self-knowledge that derives from the individual's unique attributes (retrieved 17 February, 2008. http://www.tcw.utwente.nl/theorieenoverzicht/Theory%20clusters/Interpersonal%20Communication%20and%20Relations/Social\_Identity\_Theory.doc/).

Psychosocial Functioning Measures

- Rosenberg's Self-esteem Scale
- Center for Epidemiologic Studies Short Depression Scale (CES-D 10).
- Clinician Administered PTSD Scale (CAPS-1)
- Strength of Identification with Group Membership (Cameron, 2004)

Positive Behaviors

Problem solving, perceived social support, and employment have all been found to be important predictors of decreases in anti-social behaviors and decreases in misconduct in gang affiliated youth and adults. Therefore, we will measure each of these constructs using well-tested and established instruments.

- Problem Solving Inventory (PSI)
- The Social Provisions Scale
- Employment status

Misconduct and (Violent and Non-Violent) Recidivism Data

- Self-report substance-use
- Self-report arrest history
- Police conviction history

HBI Service Data*Qualitative Case Study Design

This case study will offer an in-depth, longitudinal examination of the HBI-COUNTY Intervention effort and its impact on gang associated clients with the goal of offering a sharpened understanding of how, why, and with whom HBI is successful in transitioning clients as part of the re-entry process from gang and street life. For this component of the study, three methods for gathering information will be used: (1) direct observation, (2) in-depth interviews, and (3) analysis of documents and program materials.

Empirical evaluative studies that are concerned with placing a value on an intervention typically involve forming judgments about whether the outputs and outcomes of interventions are justified by their inputs and processes. Case study evaluations are valuable where broad, complex questions have to be addressed in complex circumstances. Case studies using qualitative methods are most valuable when the question being posed requires an investigation of a real life intervention in detail, where the focus is on how and why the intervention succeeds or fails, where the general context will influence the outcome, and where researchers asking the questions will have no control over events. As a result, the number of relevant variables will be far greater than can be controlled so that experimental approaches are simply not appropriate. Even where an intervention is well defined, it may not be discrete but rather, consist of a complex mix of changes that occur over different timescales. This is a pervasive problem in gang intervention studies, which are experiencing many parallel and interrelated changes. Taken together, these conditions exclude experimental approaches to studying the HBI program. The case study is an alternative approach, in effect, a different way of thinking about complex situations that takes the conditions into account, but is nevertheless rigorous and facilitates informed judgments about success or failure.

One hundred COUNTY clients and 100 non-COUNTY clients will be interviewed using a qualitative questionnaire based on the life history method. The life history method (Atkinson, 1998; Bruner, 2004) will be employed to gain an understanding of participants' individual behavior and life course trajectories. The life-history method is an alternative to empirical methods for identifying and documenting health and behavioral patterns of individuals and groups. It allows the researcher to explore a person's micro historical (individual) experiences within a macro historical (history of the time) framework. Life-history information challenges the researcher to understand an individual's current attitudes and behaviors and how they may have been influenced by initial decisions made at another time and in another place.

Drawing upon a Grounded Theory Approach (Glaser & Strauss, 1967), findings from the larger qualitative case study and the success case study (taken together) will be used to generate optimal reentry service models that can be applied and scaled for at-risk youth, probation youth, and emerging adult populations aged 14 - 30 throughout the COUNTY.

Analysis of Quantitative and Qualitative Data

The numerous data collection approaches included in the evaluation will produce rich and complex information about HBI clients and services programs that will be applicable on a COUNTY-wide basis. These data will be both quantitative and qualitative and will address issues from different vantage points. Generally, quantitative data provide a sound basis for addressing questions of frequency and incidence (e.g., the number of youth served and the services they receive; the percentage of them who have specific characteristics; the number of them who experience positive outcomes; the prevalence of certain perceptions about the service system and the quality of services). Quantitative data also can be used to identify important relationships among factors (e.g., services received that are related to improved outcomes for HBI clients, the intensity or qualities of services/activities that are related to positive outcomes). Qualitative data (open-ended interviews, observation, results of document reviews) typically provide rich descriptions and explanations of phenomena.

Quantitative Data Analysis

Many of the data gathered in this evaluation will be quantitative. These data will be used to describe participants, activities, and the status of HBI participants, both voluntary and referred by the COUNTY. Quantitative data will be used to examine relationships among various components of the more comprehensive HBI program, including activities/services and outcomes. These data will allow for comparisons across groups of participants (COUNTY/non-COUNTY; male/female) and strategies to identify promising practices. The different types of quantitative data analyses are described below:

Descriptive: One of the important analytic tasks of the evaluation will be to describe the youth who participate in HBI programs and the activities they experience. Examples of descriptive issues include the youth age at entry to the program, criminal history (e.g., incarceration) number of months/years youth receive services, background and family characteristics, and specific types and amounts of services received. Other data that will be described include the prevalence of mental health related measures such as depression, PTSD etc. Many of the descriptive questions can be addressed with simple descriptive statistics. These tools provide descriptive information, in conjunction with standard errors to estimate their degree of precision.

Relational: Analyses also will focus on exploring relationships among various contexts, characteristics, practices, and outcomes. These relationships may need to be examined for a variety of subgroups defined by gender and the distinction between in-residence and out-placement, other demographic or community factors, and other factors. Simple and multiple correlation coefficients for continuous, dichotomous, and ordinal data allow investigation of relationships among variables in comparison with both statistical standards and the relative strength of specific relationships across subgroups.

Comparative: Comparative questions about participant characteristics and the will be addressed in this evaluation. Cross-tabulations with tests for statistical significance, such as chi-squares, and approaches like ANOVAs, and MANOVAs, will allow us to examine the differences between groups and whether those differences are statistically significant.

Longitudinal and cross-sectional: Cross-sectional and longitudinal analyses that examine changes experienced by the participants can both provide answers to questions about the extent to which the desired results are occurring. Change measures are especially important for these youth, who are actively involved in an intervention program. Repeated measures over time offer the opportunity to examine and explain growth and change in youth behaviors, and outcomes, as well as changes in factors that could influence them, such as variations in the mental health status, receipt of particular services or sense of community. With the use of repeated t-tests, ANOVAs, and MANOVAs, we will be able to measure whether changes over time are statistically significant.

Explanatory: A vital but also challenging purpose of the analysis approach will be to explain the contributions of individual factors and combinations of factors to variations in outcomes. Several statistical approaches will be used to identify the possible explanations for the presence (or lack) of positive results. We have used several statistical methods to support our explanatory analyses, and we expect to use these methods, as appropriate, to answer the evaluation questions included in this proposal and additional questions that emerge as the project progresses.

They include:

Multiple regressions: A linear combination of variables is used to predict and explain variation in a continuous dependent variable. This technique may be used to examine relationships between youth characteristics, services and outcomes.

Logistic regression: A linear combination of variables is used to predict and explain variation in a dichotomous dependent variable. This type of analysis may be used to help determine differences in the experiences of youth who participate in one type of service versus another type of service. For example, it could be used to compare male and female youth with respect to services received.

Survival/Event History Analysis: Event history analysis (also called survival analysis, duration analysis, or transition analysis) is an umbrella term for a set of procedures for time series analysis. In the modeling of time to event data, death or failure is considered an "event" in the literature. An example of time to event modeling could be the rate or time to which COUNTY-referred youth drops out of the HBI program or is rearrested or in the case of reentry, commits a crime again after they have been released. In this case, the 'event' of interest would be time to dropping out or committing a crime. Counting Process Theory is used to explain many concepts in event history analysis. The flexibility of a counting process is that it allows modeling multiple (or recurrent) events. This type of modeling fits very well in many situations (e.g. people can go to jail multiple times, addicts can start and stop using drugs multiple times).

Qualitative Data Analysis

Data from interviews, observations and document reviews will be organized into major themes, categories, and case examples. The most common strategy for analyzing qualitative data is constant-comparison, and this approach will be used in this study. Data analysis will be ongoing and iterative (nonlinear), interim analysis, and will continue for the duration of the study. Seidel (1998) developed a useful model to explain the basic process of qualitative data analysis. The model consists of 3 parts: Noticing, Collecting, and Thinking about interesting things. These parts are interlinked and cyclical. For example while thinking about things you notice further things and collect them. Seidel likens the process to solving a jigsaw puzzle. Noticing interesting things in the data and assigning codes to them, based on topic or theme, potentially breaks the data into fragments. Codes that have been applied to the data then act as sorting and collection devices. In addition to the interim analysis process, the lead qualitative researcher will engage in memoing (recording reflective notes about what is being learned from the data). Success case study findings will be compared to the findings from the larger qualitative case study yielding an additional cross-sectional comparison of the case study data.

Implications

The planned evaluation is critical for future COUNTY efforts in Probation and related departments. When completed, this evaluation research can ultimately lead to more sensitive and pragmatic policy development and practice. Research results can help in the development and elaboration of individual, practice and contextual factors in anti-gang and re-entry programs. Additionally, these results will clarify the importance of Homeboy Industries as a countywide and national best practice for intervention and re-entry.
